CONFERENCE

MILLS & BOOMS: THE CONSERVATION OF INDUSTRIAL ARCHAEOLOGY, BUILDINGS AND SITES IN ARCHEOLOGICAL USE

What is industrial archaeology? How has it developed historically, and what special concerns does its conservation present? How should we deal with buildings and equipment deprived of their original functions or artefacts that are parts of more complex wholes? How do we manage contaminated sites? How do we conserve on sites where industrial production continues? And what might the future hold, as the planet becomes ever more industrialised? Through exemplary case studies we will consider such challenges and discuss some of the responses: “conserve as found”, adaptive reuse, recording and interpretation... Come to ASCHB2019 and join in the debate!

Speakers include:

Sir Neil Cossons, Shane Gould, Paul MacMahon, Michael Nevell, Henrietta Billings, David Went, John Tanner, Malcolm Tucker, Nick Hill, and Stephen Clarke.

After the conference, the optional tour of the Docklands Museum will be led by Malcolm Tucker.

ASCHB MEMBERS £110 NON MEMBERS £145 Includes a buffet lunch, and morning and afternoon tea. A limited number of student concessions are available: please contact the Conference Administrator to discuss these.
